Note of explanation for the J. M. Jennings, G. W. Cavender, and E. A. Jennings Surveys.

There is a certified copy of field notes of the J. C. Coleman Survey which differ from the patent for said survey. The corners described in both field notes are well marked. When the Surveyor located the Rusk Transportation Co. Surveys he had the field notes that are in error, hence those surveys are incorrectly located. I ran two lines of the J. C. Coleman Survey and found three corners well established. The patent calls for the long lines to run S. 25° W. 1129 vs. I found by measurement that they are 25 vs. longer. The erroneous field notes call for S. 24° W. 1004 vs. Hence the State Survey located by the Rusk Trans. Co. conflicts with the Coleman 150 vs. The S. E. & S. W. corners of the T. P. Rountree Survey are both found as given in the ~~field notes~~ patent

TRHVL-3-587

The S. E. corner of the John Cooper Survey is well marked but is located 43 vrs. within the Rountree Survey making a conflict. The S. W. corner of the Cooper Survey is well established by bearingtrees and is S 36° W. 986 vrs. from the S. E. corner. said Cooper Survey.

The S. W. corner of the W. S. Jennings Survey is well established. I made the S. E corner of the W. S. Jennings at the intersection of said Jennings line with the John Cooper S. W. line.

I ran three lines of the J. L. Goforth Survey and found all the corners well established. The long lines call for S. 67° W. 1411 vrs. but I found by measurement that they are S. 67° W. 1522 vrs.
